Since our last newsletter I have had the opportunity to work with a great board on our goals for NMLA for the coming year. The board met early in June to establish our budget for the coming year and to discuss our serious financial situation as an association.

As with many other library associations, NMLA is facing financial worries. In the next months, we will be asking for your support with a variety of fundraisers, as well as asking you to renew your membership promptly or even early. To save resources, we will increase our use of electronic notices and convert from a print newsletter to an electronic newsletter. Please consider adding an additional donation sum to your membership when you renew. Any ideas you might have regarding fundraising for NMLA or benefits we can offer to entice new members are welcome and should be sent to me at tglatz66@gmail.com.

Don’t forget to “Save the Date” for our upcoming Mini-Conference October 25-26 in Carlsbad, New Mexico. The theme for this conference is “Going to Bat for Libraries.” I am excited and look forward to seeing the programs that will be presented by a variety of libraries about how they are “Going to Bat” for libraries in their communities. This is an opportunity for you as professionals to share your knowledge with others in our widespread state! Please consider submitting a program proposal and attending this conference!

NMLA is taking part in the Macy’s Shop For a Cause. http://www.nmla.org/docs/Macys.pdf has more information. For $5.00 you can buy a pass to shop at Macy’s at Coronado Center in Albuquerque on August 25th and save 20% all day in the store. You can purchase the certificate on our website at www.nmla.org.

As soon as you purchase a pass, it will be e-mailed to you within 48 hours.

Please let your friends and neighbors know, as well!

The history of our newsletter documents the history of NMLA itself, not only showing where we’ve been as an organization and a profession, but also where we’re going in the future. NMLA did not have its own publication until late 1968. It issued a quarterly pamphlet called "New Mexico Libraries" for four years. Previously, NMLA news was published in the New Mexico State Library’s publication, “New Mexico Library Bulletin” beginning in 1930.

In January, 1973, "New Mexico Libraries Newsletter", began publication in a tabloid newsprint format with five issues per year. In 1975, the title was changed to "New Mexico Library Association Newsletter".

In 1984 the format was changed from newsprint to paper and in 1987 the layout was changed from tabloid to magazine style. The title continued until 2010 when it was changed to the "NMLA Bulletin." The Bulletin continued with the volume/number series that began in 1973 until today.

One thing that has remained consistent throughout all of these formats and titles is keeping the New Mexico Library community informed about NMLA, connecting us with each other and our libraries. We still plan to do exactly that with a PDF format on our website: http://nmla.org/newsletters/. Past issues of the above mentioned publications as well as the current NMLA Bulletin can be viewed from the website. Happy reading!
Ben Wakashige’s Retirement

Celebrated library administrator Ben Wakashige retired at the end of May. Library professionals from around the country attended a reception hosted by CNM Libraries on May 28 that recognized the significant contributions made by Ben during his impressive career.

Colleagues and friends of Ben shared heartfelt speeches and humorous stories and the overall atmosphere was one of appreciation and congratulations. CNM staff bid farewell to Ben with a gift certificate to his favorite plant nursery, encouraging him to pursue his life-long hobby of gardening during retirement.

Ben Wakashige began his forty-year library career in 1972 at Birmingham-Southern College. His career also took him to universities and colleges in Maine, Texas, Oregon, and Colorado, primarily in Library administration.

Ben spent much of his career in New Mexico, where he worked in school libraries at Zuni High School and Albuquerque Academy; state universities such as Western New Mexico University, as Library Director and Acting Vice President of Academic Affairs; University of Albuquerque, National American University, and he also had the honor of serving as New Mexico’s State Librarian.

Other accomplishments include teaching as a visiting professor at the University of New Mexico, as well as consulting for Albuquerque Public Libraries. Ben rounded out his incredibly diverse library career at Central New Mexico Community College, balancing the demands of college library administration with a return to government service, as interim State Librarian in Santa Fe.

In 2011 the New Mexico Library Association presented Ben with an Honorary Life Membership award in acknowledgement of his many accomplishments and dedication to libraries in New Mexico and beyond.

Astronaut at Fellin Library, Gallup, NM

Harrison Schmitt, the last man to walk on the moon, recently visited the Octavia Fellin Public Library in Gallup, NM as part of the library’s Summer Reading Program. Dr. Schmitt, who grew up in Silver City, NM and received his PhD in geology from Harvard, flew on the Apollo 17 mission and was the last man to step onto the moon.

The program drew a standing room-only crowd of 150 including two members of Gallup’s City Council. Dr. Schmitt encouraged the children to sit down on the floor as close to him as possible, and was particularly engaging with them. He first showed a short video, with commentary, of the Apollo 17 training and mission. His insight and memories were fascinating. The children found his gravity-defying falls especially hilarious. A moving moment came when a community member announced that her son was training to be an astronaut and asked her to convey the message to Dr. Schmitt, that as a NM astronaut, he was his hero.

Dr. Schmitt graciously signed autographs for an endless line of children and adults. He was an amazing example for Gallup’s children that by “Dreaming Big” you can go anywhere, even to the moon.
Molly Molloy Receives New Mexico Library Leadership Award

By Jeanette Smith

New Mexico State University Librarian Molly Molloy received the New Mexico Library Leadership Award from the New Mexico Library Association during the association’s annual conference in April in Las Cruces.

Since 1992, Molloy has served as the Latin American and Border Studies Librarian at the NMSU Library. She provides reference and instructional services, develops the Library’s collections in her assigned areas and works closely with faculty and students conducting research on border issues and/or Latin American studies.

Molloy’s advocacy of border issues has extended far beyond her professional job duties, while these professional duties have informed and have given shape to her activism. She has been tireless in her efforts to share information and to encourage critical thinking about the complex realities of border life and to seek fairness and justice for individuals whose voices are frequently missing from the larger national debate.

Before coming to NMSU, Molloy wrote and edited bilingual publications sharing news about Nicaragua, and learned about the complexities of immigration issues as a paralegal and document counselor in Louisiana and California. After beginning her career as a librarian, Molloy recognized the power of the Internet as a tool for sharing information and fostering what she deemed “communities of affinity” through which geographically dispersed people could come together around issues of common concern.

In the early 1990s, Molloy developed online guides for Latin American and Border Issues (http://nmsu.libguides.com/border), which became popular among scholars and community residents. Her Web guides receive 10,000 to 15,000 hits each month, receiving well deserved national and international acclaim.

A more recent effort to share information about social justice on the border is found in Molloy’s work on the Frontera email list, a border news service she created several years ago which has nearly eight hundred subscribers. Molloy’s work on the Frontera list is highly valued by her readers. University of Puerto Rico professor Victor Federico Torres applauds Molloy’s efforts, saying that the Frontera news list is “the most comprehensive, up-to-date source of narco-related violence on the U.S.-Mexico Border.”

Many articles are provided and/or translated by Molloy herself. She is unstinting in her efforts to provide journalists and other list subscribers with the best data sources available to help them understand and convey stories about current border events. Her work on the list has informed articles that have appeared in publications including the Houston Chronicle, the Wall Street Journal and In these Times.

Interviews with Molloy have appeared in the New York Times, the Nation, the Guardian and the Observer as well as the nationally-syndicated radio program, Democracy Now and National Public Radio’s Hearing Voices series on Ciudad Juárez. These articles and interviews have all highlighted the significance of Molloy’s work, and have clarified and provided context to the complex and bloody situation on the border that many in the United States do not understand.

Recently Molloy collaborated with journalist Charles Bowden and filmmaker Gianfranco Rosi on the award-winning documentary The Sicario—Room 164. This film, which premiered at the Venice Biennale in September 2011, continues to garner praise. The film provides a first-hand account of the College Enrichment Program at UNM

By Carroll Botts, Freshman Experience Librarian, UNM University Libraries

One of the sure signs of summer at UNM is the onset of campus tours for incoming freshmen. Since the 1990s the University Libraries has participated in the College Enrichment Program summer orientations. The College Enrichment Program (CEP) prepares incoming students for a successful university experience. Occurring throughout the summer, CEP orientations provide incoming freshmen a three-day and two-night campus experience during which they are introduced to skills for college success, academic life, campus services, and, of course, the library.

Our one-hour library CEP tours are mostly walking tours; they are not research and database orientations. (After spending most of the night up giggling in the dorms, it’s unlikely our new students would retain that kind of information!)

We introduce students to library organization and services. We also emphasize how college students use the library, which is quite different than their high school experience.

♦ The library is a place to come between their classes, at night, and on weekends.
♦ Students come to read, study, do homework, write papers, and collaborate with other students in a variety of study environments with liberal food and drink policies.
♦ Research help in any subject is available in any library, online, by phone, or text.

It’s never a problem finding instructors to conduct our CEP tours. We enjoy this opportunity to meet the new freshmen and make a good first impression for the library. We hope that when our freshmen return in the fall they’ll remember that the University Libraries is one of their places on campus, a pleasant and convenient place staffed by friendly people who will help them find the information they’ll need to become successful college students.

Bonds for Libraries SIG Update

By Olivia Baca, Chair, NMLA Bonds for Libraries Special Interest Group

Join the Bonds for Libraries SIG in advocating for the passage of the 2012 GO Bond B. GO Bond B will provide New Mexico libraries with $9.7 million to help meet demands for library resources and internet services.

New Weekly Photo Contest

The Bonds for Libraries SIG is encouraging all library professionals and supporters to help document the positive impact of Bond funds by entering our new photo contest, beginning July 9th. Each week, enter to win a $10 iTunes gift card by submitting a photo of one or more library item purchased with bond funds. Photos will be judged on creativity, so please consider including library staff, patrons, or Lolcats. Please send entries to bondsforlibraries@gmail.com. Submissions will be due each Friday at 5pm, with winners announced the following Tuesday morning on the Bonds for Libraries website: bondsforlibraries.org.

Albuquerque’s Special Collections Library

Joe Sabatini, revising and updating a City of Albuquerque Press Release; Photos take by Joe Sabatini

Mayor Richard J. Berry and other dignitaries cut a ribbon to officially reopen the Special Collections Library on Tuesday June 5th. The reopening was celebrated with an open house on Saturday, June 9th that featured music from a jazz combo and a flute and harp duo, a children’s story time, a walking tour of the surrounding historic neighborhood, and a Center for the Book demonstration that included viewing a demonstration of antique printing presses. In addition, a new public art piece called The Book Warden, created by the late Melissa Zink was unveiled in the library patio. The standing figure sculpture is decorated with philosophical and whimsical quotes along with decorative spines and covers of old books.

Special Collections Library renovations include an all-new exterior stucco, door and window refurbishment, interior paint, refurbishment of furniture, electrical upgrades, and, in select rooms, new windows, fans, flooring, ceilings and light fixtures. ADA-compliant restrooms have been added, and Gustav Baumann’s decorative paintings have been restored.

Botts Hall’s ceiling and light fixtures have been restored, as well as the installation of a new vestibule. To create an outstanding venue for lectures, films and other events, a new projection and sound systems has been installed, including a 12-foot screen. Additionally, acoustical vent dampers and acoustical wall panels have been installed to provide outstanding acoustics.

The Special Collections Library of the Albuquerque/Bernalillo County Libraries houses research collections on New Mexico history and culture. The 1925 Pueblo/Spanish Revival-style building is a registered Albuquerque landmark in the historic Huning-Highlands neighborhood. The building had previously been renovated in 1976. As a research library, materials are available for in-house use. The library does provide patrons with the ability to reserve circulating materials and pick up holds from the rest of the library system, a new service that had been requested by the library’s neighbors.

The New Mexico Collection features nine thousand books on New Mexico history and culture, with an emphasis on the Albuquerque area. Supplementary resources include over 200 regional periodicals (current and defunct), a complete set of topographical maps for the state, other historic maps, City of Albuquerque documents, pamphlets, postcards, and biographical information. Special files include archival materials on Ernie Pyle and Professor Dorothy Cline, local postcards and a centennial history of the Albuquerque Public Library. Periodic exhibits feature local history materials from our collection and from other sources.

The Albuquerque Bernalillo County Libraries is part of the City’s Cultural Services Department, with 17 locations serving a diverse population with a variety of programs, events and services. In 2011, the library welcomed more than 2.5 million visitors and managed the circulation of more than 4.5 million materials. Throughout 2012 Special Collections is hosting Centennial lectures in the newly renovated Botts Hall. More information can be found at library.cabq.gov/specialcollections.

Thank you, Scholarship Committee

by Samantha Villa, Carlsbad Public Library

I would like to thank the scholarship committee for awarding me the Marion Dorroh Memorial Scholarship for the Fall 2010 semester. I am happy to inform you that this scholarship was not wasted. On May 13, 2012, I obtained my Master’s degree in Library Science from the University of North Texas.

The Master’s program at UNT had wonderful instructors that taught me a number of skills that will allow me to apply my knowledge as a library professional for years to come. It was a challenging program, but definitely worth it! My motivation for pursuing a career in Library Science came from the education I received at NMSU-DABCC. I had two instructors I was thankful for: Professor Townley for telling me about the program at UNT and encouraging me to continue and Susan Pinkerton for being an awesome instructor and advisor.

People News: Olivia Baca

Olivia Baca, Circulation and Outreach Librarian at Central New Mexico Community College, has been selected as a participant in the Minnesota Institute for Early Career Librarians, at the University of Minnesota. Established in 1998, the week-long institute convenes biannually, and brings 24 early career academic librarians from traditionally underrepresented groups, and provides them with the opportunity to learn about leadership and organizational behavior in institutions of higher learning. The 2012 Institute will be held from July 21-27, in Minneapolis Minnesota.
Bumper stickers

Newly designed bumper stickers are available. If you are not a fan of permanently styling your car with stickers, consider taping a bumper sticker to a window in your car or truck until November. This compromise allows you to help get the message out about Bond funding for libraries without permanently changing the aesthetics of your vehicle.

Bumper stickers are available by request from the Bonds for Libraries SIG. Email bondsforlibraries@gmail.com. Don’t forget to ask colleagues, friends, and family members to apply them too.

Advocacy updates

Media kits will be distributed to New Mexico libraries at the end of July. In addition to brochures, bookmarks, and a sample op-ed letter, the kit will contain a CD with radio spots in English and in Spanish. As in 2010, the message of the radio spots will focus on the economic value of libraries.

Volunteer opportunities

♦ Distribute bookmarks, brochures and bumper stickers locally. These are available from the SIG, and the publications may also be downloaded from their website.

♦ Work with fellow librarians and supporters to raise money to purchase radio spots.

♦ Write op-ed pieces and letters to the editor of local newspapers. There are samples at the website. Remember that absentee and early voting both start in October and that more than thirty percent of voters will have voted before Election Day, November 6th.

Life of a hit man for the Juárez cartel, and it was also the basis for the book, El Sicario: The Autobiography of a Mexican Assassin (Nation Books, 2011), which Molloy translated and edited with Bowden.

Molloy inspires New Mexico librarians by example, going each day beyond her daily duties by tracking and documenting the daily murders in Ciudad Juárez. The list of the dead that Molloy keeps signifies that someone cares enough to make sure these victims have a voice and that their deaths will not go unnoticed. Molloy provides access to information from the borderland that would otherwise be lost because of its limited distribution outside of her Frontera list. She provides an invaluable service not only to today’s border researchers but to those of the future.

For more information, contact Molloy at (575) 646-6931 or mollymolloy@gmail.com.

By Sandy Farrell, Director, Hobbs Public Library

“We are drinking from the saucer because our cup has overflowed!” Dream Big....READ! exceeded our dreams of stimulating interest in the library, increasing checkouts and attendance. This year’s attendance was up 16%. Checkouts totaled 6,268. This was an increase of 2,921 items from the previous month and an increase of 2,048 from last year. Interest and enthusiasm was non-stop and it turned out to be a ‘total-fitness program’ (mind, body, and soul). Attendance averaged over 80 for the programs presented, while Special Program Presentations averaged above 150.

In the mist of modern technology, ‘the discarded-old’ solved a décor dilemma. Our astro-bat needed a tether to his Space Shuttle. One was fashioned from paper. Ah-ha! We used the phone’s line for this. The same discarded phone’s cord then became ROCKIN READER’S amp cord. (See photos).

Our pilot program, Parents as Reading Partners, was heartily embraced. Parents enjoyed the fact that they too could participate in a project that benefited both themselves and their children. For the third consecutive year, all SRP participants completing the Reading Challenge were treated to a pool party. This reward was a cool-treat for the winners and their families.
